28 Years in Management
Education

Dr. Atul R. Deshpande
Ph.D., M.Phil., MA., MBA
Director, KLS IMER

I am, indeed, very happy to join the KLS' IMER as Director and Professor. Today, and in forthcoming future, the nature of management education has not only been changing vertically in terms of curriculum and the use of technology, but it has also been posing key challenges to making management education more relevant in terms of its practical value and job employability. To meet with these two goals very effectively what we need as more cautious efforts on our part as 'team' are professional faculty, quality curriculum integrated with industry requirements and vast usage of technology in our pedagogy. Management education from any corner of the world teaches how to add value to our decision making process and how optimally and judiciously solve our business related problems. In this endeavor not merely one branch or specialization of management science would be adequate to address the issue of value creation but 'the systemic approach to management science' would be very effective way to handle the issue of value creation. At the end of the day what we should seek is eternal happiness with productivity and efficiency. The Institute where I have joined I would like to transform these values into actual practical doing that would lead the stakeholders to a more outcome-based results. At this juncture, these many words are more than enough.
